A flush crept over Emma Darnell's face like the rise of hope within her heart.

"And the doctor says that he won't recover consciousness for at least twenty—four hours!" she cried. "Oh, then we can get dear father away."

"Hello, Gene Ibert," said James Darnell as he tottered out, "I didn't know that I had such a good, true friend at hand, though God knows I need one."

"Hello, Brocton," cried Ibert cordially.

"Why, I haven't seen you since we cleaned up that gravelly deposit in Matto Grasso, How come you here? While it doesn't do to ask questions under the line, I had rather supposed—"
